APIMELL 2021 HAPPENS AT THE RIGHT TIME

During these unusual times, in the North of Italy, have been activated a lot of competition notices to support the emerging professions of Apiculture for the upcoming biennium 2021-2022. The resumption of the Exhibition activities places on the front lines one of the most important international fair for the world of apiculture, APIMELL, organized by Piacenza Expo from October 30th to November 1st 2021.

Many dedicated actions have been taken in support: technical assistance for the companies, communication and training courses, purchase of medical devices, analysis of the products; Also, many bee swarms and queen bees have been purchased to encourage the repopulation threatened by climate change. Many Italian regions are planning operations to ease the young beekeepers.

The Ministry of Agriculture and Forestry has officially opened the competition notice to access the 2022 funds for the beekeeping sector and the arrangements to allocate the amounts for the National beekeeping program implementation.

The future of the quality rural and apicultural development is the heartbeat of APIMELL, a very important meeting place to showcase the latest technologies, equipment and services related to honey productions and its derivatives. A trade show where is possible to buy directly from the main beekeeping companies and the best solutions on the apicultural sector.

Piacenza Expo decided to add value to this APIMELL edition alongside the emerging fair FORESTALIA, dedicated to forestry technologies and equipment and to repropose a special edition of BUONVIVERE, a trade market focused on typical food products. This exhibition combination makes this event a must-see for thousands of visitors, not only professional.

An important meeting awaited by the Italian and European apiculture world. Piacenza Expo implemented its services to meet the new procedures and protocols, to guarantee the best experience during the fair in safety.
